Lens-Based: Recent Acquisitions to the Permanent Collection presents a selection of photographs and videos acquired by University Galleries through donation or purchase since 2012. Created between 1929 and 2016, the works include gelatin silver prints, archival pigment prints, chromogenic prints, and digital videos. Artists in the exhibition are Dmitri Baltermants (1912–1990), Ilse Bing (1899–1998), Ken Heyman (b. 1930), Chrissy LaMaster (b. 1973), Jason Lazarus (b. 1975), Danny Lyon (b. 1942), Cecil McDonald Jr. (b. 1965), Scott Rankin (b. 1954), August Sander (1876–1964), Carrie Schneider (b. 1979), Lou Stoumen (1917–1991), and Rana Young (b. 1983).

Works on view include Ilse Bing's 1952 Plein Air Painter, showing a female artist painting in a lush landscape; August Sander's 1929 portrait of artist Heinrich Hoerle, taken while he was painting a portrait of boxer Hein Domgorgen; Jason Lazarus's 2010 portrait of astrophysicist Eric Becklin, the "first human to see the center of our galaxy;" and Ken Heyman's 1969 portrait of a Newark, New Jersey, beauty parlor owner. Lou Stoumen's 1981 landscape focuses on a small lemon tree in a Los Angeles neighborhood while the lone figure in Dmitri Baltermants' Skylight repair, Cuba seems out of place in a futuristic geometric environment.

Selections from Danny Lyon's Bike Riders series, for which the photographer immersed himself in the Chicago Outlaws Motorcycle Club, include his 1966 gelatin silver prints Cal, Elkhorn, Wisconsin and Cowboy at Rogues' Picnic, South Chicago. Two 2016 works from Rana Young's The Rug's Topography series, self-described as "blended self-portraits," were made as the artist and her partner navigated both the dissolution of the romantic portion of their relationship and one partner's decision to transition from male to female. Cecil McDonald Jr.'s 2013 Ms. Greta, To Be Cool is from the artist's ongoing In the Company of Black series, for which he photographed people he describes as "extraordinarily ordinary." Carrie Schneider's 2011 Burning House (October, afternoon) is from the artist's Burning House series (of 15 photographs and a film), for which the artist repeatedly built and burned a small house on a rural Wisconsin island, while photographing and filming it within the ever-changing landscape. Videos made from 2001 to 2007 by retiring School of Art video professor Scott Rankin will screen continuously throughout the exhibition, including Path (2003), which features aerial, underwater, and on-the-ground footage of our natural environment.

A reading area in the window gallery will feature books about the artists and the history of photography and video.
